Dear Members and Alternate Members of the Board of the Green Climate Fund:

We are organizations, movements and civil society groups from developing countries with decades of experience working for the rights and aspirations of peoples and communities. We are writing to express our unified call for the adoption of the most robust environmental and social protections at the Green Climate Fund.ⁱ We are joined in solidarity by the undersigned organizations based in developed countries.

Consistent with the United Nations Framework Convention on Climate Change (UNFCCC) and other relevant international agreements, developed countries are obligated to provide the necessary finance to enable affected peoples to deal with climate impacts, build resilience, and shift to more sustainable, equitable low carbon development pathways. Similarly, States have the obligation to their citizens and all peoples to use climate funds for these purposes effectively and responsibly in a democratic, accountable, and transparent manner that respects human rights and does not harm the environment.ⁱⁱ

The following principles, obligations, and standards must be upheld by and applied to the GCF, the governments that contribute to or receive GCF funds, members of the GCF Board, and non-State actors that receive funds or implement GCF funded projects. These principles, obligations, and standards must apply to all GCF activities -- operations, modalities, terms of financing arrangements, financial instruments, financial intermediaries, projects, sub-projects, programs, etc.

Sovereignty, self-determination, and the fulfillment of State obligations -- The GCF must respect the sovereignty and self-determination of developing countries and their peoples. GCF funding should not be used as leverage to impose on recipient governments conditionalities that are extrinsic to fiduciary terms and mutual obligations of financial arrangements. Likewise, States should not invoke sovereignty as a reason for failing to fulfill their obligations to deliver on the following principles, obligations and standards, which are not conditionalities and must be upheld and operationalized by the GCF as a public institution.

“Do no harm” principle -- GCF activities should not have harmful impacts, whether social, gender, economic, or environmental. To ensure and verify that harm is not done, the GCF must develop strict mandatory due diligence and review procedures for all access modalities and all Fund activities to ensure compliance with the “do no harm” principle and rigorous monitoring of directly and indirectly financed activities throughout their lifetime. Binding “do no harm” language must be included in all contracts, sub-contracts, and agreements. GCF finance must not trigger involuntary displacement (shelter and/or livelihoods), nor be used to fund fossil fuel projects.

Financial intermediaries (FIs) -- It is especially difficult for FIs and other conduits of indirect finance to ensure adherence to the “do no harm” principle, as was clearly demonstrated by a 2013 CAO audit carried out on the International Finance Corporation (IFC)’s large FI portfolio.ⁱⁱⁱ The IFC was proven unable to trace, understand or document the environmental and social impacts of its FI investments, presenting a dangerous risk to the environment and affected communities. We are opposed to the use of international FIs by the GCF. The use of domestic FIs, many of which are also opaque and non-transparent, must only be considered if directly proposed by recipient countries for their climate programs. In such cases, the GCF must then ensure due diligence in adequate assessment of the potential environmental and social impacts and risks associated with the FI’s existing and likely future portfolio; full public disclosure, consultation, and documentation of free, prior, and informed consent on all FI subprojects; and permanent transparent monitoring throughout the lifetime of projects and subprojects.

Financial integrity and anti-corruption -- Financial accounting and procurement practices should adhere to the highest international standards. The sources of funds must be demonstrably free of links to money laundering. There must be no use of secrecy jurisdictions/tax havens for domiciling funds flowing to or from the GCF. Any links to public officials, their family members, or associates must be made public and publicly examined to ensure freedom from corruption. There should be no provision of immunity for violations of the law by those carrying out any service as part of the GCF.

Public consultations; fully documented free, prior, and informed consent (FPIC); and grievance mechanism --

The GCF must carry out regular public consultations about its operations, programs, and projects in a manner that is responsive and appropriate to the needs and concerns of affected groups and communities. These consultations should be transparent, inclusive, and in accordance with the international right of FPIC. The GCF should ensure upward harmonization with the highest standards and practices. Consultations should cover concept, design, and location of the projects and programs; assumptions, objectives, and methodologies; assessment of impacts and risks (economic, environment, gender, and social); and monitoring and evaluation. Information and all documents should be provided at least 120 days in advance of any funding decision -- in languages that communities understand and with concerted outreach to marginalized groups. Special attention should be paid to affected communities through processes that uphold their right to make decisions about matters affecting their lives, livelihoods, and/or environment. This must include the right to veto projects or programs, as well as protection from intimidation and coercion by project proponents and their supporters. Further, the GCF must provide an easily accessible independent complaints or grievance mechanism with civil society oversight.

Equity, non-discrimination and inclusion -- The GCF must develop principles, criteria, and a clear system and indices for equitable and fair allocation of climate finance across countries, founded on consensus and agreement by developing countries with full input by civil society groups from developing countries. The GCF should not finance activities that reinforce inequities and discrimination across and within countries. No country, or population group within a country, should suffer discrimination, exclusion, or marginalization on the basis of economic status, gender, race/ethnicity/caste, religious belief, or other social constructs. All GCF activities and measures must be based on an equitable assessment of capacities, potential, vulnerabilities, and the needs of countries, peoples, and groups. Inclusion as an operational guideline logically extends from diligent compliance with principles of equity and non-discrimination.

Transparency -- The Governing Instrument of the GCF mandates it to operate in a transparent and accountable manner.^{iv} Maximum transparency – to the public, and especially to those most affected by the climate crisis – and avoidance of the use of “business confidentiality” clauses^v are prerequisites for compliance with the aforementioned principles, standards, and obligations. Live web streaming of the GCF Board Meetings is a fundamental first step for transparency.

Compliance with International Law and Upward Harmonization with the Highest National and International Standards: The GCF must operate in compliance with international law and binding obligations pertaining to human rights (including economic, social, cultural, gender, indigenous, and labor rights, among others), and the environment. In addition, all GCF activities must meet or exceed the highest of national and international standards on transparency, social and environmental protection, labor, gender, and Indigenous Peoples rights. Standards should account for gender segregated baseline information, and assessment of direct, indirect, induced, cumulative, and long term social, gender, and environmental impacts and risks associated with proposed financing. Further, there must be recognition that human and environmental rights obligations have primacy over financial obligations.

Thank you for your serious consideration of these most important matters.

Sincerely,

ⁱⁱ The Paris Declaration on Aid Effectiveness and the Accra Agenda for Action highlight the fact that governments should be inclusive in setting up national policies and plans -- including through consultation with CSOs; should be consistent with their international commitments on gender equality, human rights, disability, and environmental sustainability; fight corruption; and be transparent and accountable to people in developing and donor countries. <http://www.oecd.org/dataoecd/11/41/34428351.pdf>.
